Do you manage under performing staff? High staff turnover and absenteeism? Trying to hold onto your high performers? Research has shown that effective feedback is the solution to managing these issues.

Providing performance feedback is an essential skill for anyone who supervises staff. When people feel good they do good and when this is appreciated they do even better!

This workshop will provide you with a proven PFF (Performance Feedback Framework) that you can apply in your workplace.

The modules covered in the training are as follows:

Module 1 What affects staff performance and motivation?

Module 2 Why is feedback so important?

Module 3 Conflict resolution, communication & negotiation skills

Module 4 Performance feedback framework

Module 5 How to manage poor performance

Module 6 Motivating employees through goal setting

Objectives: To gain knowledge, understanding and practical skills in the following:

- Motivation and factors influencing performance
- Models of motivation and strategies for motivating others
- Strategies for maximising performance
- The link between feedback and performance
- Guidelines and strategies for giving effective feedback that facilitates performance and motivation
- Implementing the Performance Feedback Framework
- Strategies for managing poor performance
